Sunday Swim Display School Opens on Wednesday

Red Cross Awards Presented to Winners By Mrs. Patrick

Nearly one hundred and fifty of Strathmore's townspeople turned out at the Lions Pool on Sunday afternoon, when a swimming display was held. Culminating the season's swimming program, the display was watched with great interest.

Rev. D. A. Ford handled the program very capably from start to finish, with the aid of the Community Council public address system, which was used for the first time in its portable capacity. Assisting in the running of the events were R. Milligan, and Ray Rajala, pool supervisor. Judges for the course were Dr. J. W. Giffen, Cpl. S. L. Mott, and Chuck MacLean.

Two features of the day which provided considerable amusement for the spectators were the egg and spoon race, and the log rolling contest. Much more success was experienced by the egg and spoon contestants, none succeeding in standing on the log.

On behalf of the Red Cross, Mrs. G. H. Patrick, local president, presented awards and pins to the successful candidates in the recent swim tests, conducted by the Red Cross swimming committee. Pins were presented to Miss Verna Mae Gannon, Miss Doreen Verdine, and Donna Milligan for intermediate tests, and to Irene, Verna and Kay Bennett, Norma Jean and Donna Anderson, Jeannine Gannon, Hilda Ekke and Art Lange for junior tests.

Miss Enid Baldwin was presented with a senior swimmer award, and also made assistant umpire of the pool. Enid has been lending considerable assistance through the past weeks, and helping particularly with the younger members.

Find Records of Gatenby-Fisher

Early Storekeepers In Strathmore

Cleaning out a little used section behind the Western Department Store a few days ago, Mr. Harry Brown and his staff came across an accumulation of old papers, including almost everything imaginable in the assortment.

Some of the most interesting articles were a number of cancelled cheques, drafts and other business papers dating from the days when Gatenby and Fisher were running the store. There were also a few copies of sale bills run by the same men. These had been printed by the Strathmore Standard, and more than thirty years after were still in good readable condition.

Earliest of the papers found was a cheque to George Anderson, bearing the date March 1, 1914, covering the "balance of wages" for the month. Other cheques included one to John MacKenzie, at that time owner of The Standard, Messrs. Gatenby and Fisher were also among the list of payees, each apparently drawing fifty dollars a week for their share in the store.

The store was continued under Gatenby and Fisher until Mr. Fisher sold his interest to his partner. Then in 1928, Mr. Gatenby disposed of the store to S. Libin, who only a few months ago turned it over to H. Brown, present owner.

Rockyford K.C.'s Celebrate at Picnic

Rockyford Council of Knights of Columbus put on a successful picnic on the Rockyford Parish Grounds Sunday August 22nd. Brethren and their families from Rockyford, Rosebud, Carbon, Strathmore and Standard enjoyed a perfect day of outing on the well kept grounds in an ideal summer setting. The Catholic Women's League had provided coffee and the youngsters were treated to soft drinks and ice cream. Soft ball games were played and Rockyford must all come, won 39 to 11.

The married men got badly winded against the single men and lost 16 to 5. In the mixed 6 year old race Linda Fezor was first under the wire; in the 8 year old race Bill Kachel earned first honors. In the free for all Women's race the result was close and exciting but the married women proved fastest: 1st Mrs. Gaudin, 2nd Miss Margaret Gregory, 3rd Mrs. Jerry Munchrath. In the Knight's flat race the result was a Photo finish between Mike Stinson, Ralph Gregory and Jerry Munchrath. In the obstacle race for Knights Tony Voelker was barred because he still had his shoes on when crossing the wire in a walk, but Willy Bosman, Jerry Munchrath and Bill Gregory proved the fastest in overcoming obstacles.

Strathmore's streets looked more deserted than in usual, since all the children who have been seen for the past couple of months up and down the streets were now back at the old grail.

New buses were run into Strathmore by Jim Kernack and Andy Scott, covering the Akenstad and Orange Valley school pupils, following the closing of the above two schools.

SHELVING THE FREIGHT INQUIRY

Efforts of the seven provinces to have a royal commission appointed to inquire into the freight rate structure of Canada received a set-back with the recent announcement from the department of justice that this appointment is outside the sphere of the Canadian government under present regulations. Freight rates, it says, have been placed in the hands of the board of transport commissioners.

This means that a number of alternatives are open. We can wait until next year when Parliament meets, and try to have the legislation changed. The government might appoint a royal commission to study transport problems, which would also embrace freight rates. And at the same time, the government might order the board of transport commissioners to go into the freight rates problem in the general inquiry into freight rates they have already been ordered to undertake.

Which is just fine, as far as the protesting provinces (all but Ontario and Quebec) are concerned.

The last suggestion amounts to ordering the board of transport commissioners to sit in judgment on themselves, and inquire into whether they feel their actions have been right and just all through. The West, and the East, can hardly expect a great deal from an inquiry of this nature.

Alternatively, we can wait until Parliament meets, or we can wait, maybe forever, until a commission inquiring into transport problems generally looks at the problems of railways, of trucks, of steamships, and of airlines.

In the meantime, the non-central residents of the whole country will continue to pay disproportionately high rates. And in the meantime, no answer can reasonably be given to the railways on their request for an interim increase of fifteen percent and a permanent increase of twenty percent. For that matter, their original twenty-one percent increase is not yet out of question.

So the matter seems to be neatly shelved for the time being at least, and the western farmer and businessman and householder will continue to pay through the nose on everything they buy from anywhere else, and everything they sell anywhere else.

The Lethbridge Herald says that the city's streets have so many holes that they've been compared to a honeycomb. And it will take a lot of busy bees to repair them, too.

AN ORCHID FOR WILHELMINA

Though many in the Western World will pay no particular attention to the ceremonies on Saturday when Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands steps down from her throne, it is nevertheless an event of considerable moment.

To the Dutch, Queen Wilhelmina has been, in many respects, what Queen Victoria was to the British. Like Victoria, she ascended the throne when only eighteen, though unlike Victoria she has decided against reigning until death. Through fifty years on the throne, Queen Wilhelmina has learned much about statecraft. She is reputed to have much the same commanding manner with her ministers as did Victoria.

Her fifty years on the Dutch throne have been eventful ones. Much has happened, both in Holland and throughout the entire world, since the end of the last century. And through it all Wilhelmina has gained and retained the affection and the admiration of her people. She has maintained the common touch. She is known to her people and she knows of them.

Now when her daughter is to take her place, Juliana will receive much of the same popularity, for she has already gained a warm place in the hearts of the people. It is fortunate, also, that her husband, Prince Bernhard is also well received. Originally a German, Bernhard endeared himself to the Dutch all through the war, for his complete renunciation of things German, and for his loyal support of the Netherlands.

In Others' Words

We Need Substitutes

Looks like we might get olcomargarine yet, all other things equal and the ginnerings of sense being agitated at Ottawa and in the dairy councils. This paper has said before, and so have a lot of others, that butter is a good thing but to eat it better and when the time comes that this particular spread is not available in quantity or at any price for the average man, it is a wicked crying shame that he should be deprived of a satisfactory substitute. And we say it again and again and mean it. Working men and women, children and those of us who must cut economic corners have been overlooked for just about long enough. We are sick and tired of it and of the nonsense that has been talked for the past few years. Moreover, if prices of ordinary food stuffs continue to rise it will be necessary to introduce a goodly number of other substitutes to round out the diet which is necessarily provided, day after day by housewives who are getting a bit sick of being the centre of the squeeze. In the last issue of Mac-

Lean's magazine Beverly Baxter is quoted as saying that "The women are exhausted, impatient and disillusioned. Canadian women are also getting a little sick of the much lesser trials which they have had in their daily struggle to provide three square meals a day. And they are inclined to think that their lords and masters are a bit stupid from time to time when they take so much time out to concentrate on atom bombs and so little to solve the problems connected with the abundance which they demand with regularly and despatch—to say nothing of nutrition, three times daily. This is not a criticism of farmers or of those who retail their products. But it is a suggestion that the high cost of living is not helped any by the concentration of the powers that be on the inevitability of bigger and better wars, which are inevitably the outcome of less and less food in a world that is possessed of the scientific equipment and know-how to provide luxuries to rival the Arabian Nights."

What Are We Paying For?

(The Canadian Statesman)

The word "Success" has at least two different meanings. A privately-owned enterprise is successful if it attracts enough customers to make a profit; a government enterprise is successful as long as it does not antagonize the public to the point where they demand its abolition.

One need only glance at the balance sheet of the CBC to discover how singularly unsuccessful that corporation is under the first definition. However, as a government monopoly, it is only liable to be judged under the second; and by that criterion it is reasonably successful. It is regarded at best as satisfactory, and at worst as tolerable, by the great majority of the Canadian listening public.

But is that good enough? After all, the listener pays for the CBC. It might be argued that he could not legitimately complain about the rates, for he is not paying for the service. He is merely paying for the service of the privately-owned stations, to whose support he contributes not a single penny; but from the CBC, to which he contributes $2.50 a year directly, and more indirectly, he is entitled to demand service that is more than tolerable, or even satisfactory.

The facts, as borne out by actual audience surveys, are: first, that a large part of the Canadian audience deliberately ignores CBC programs to listen to independent stations; second, that the CBC has its largest audience when it broadcasts American programs such as Charlie McCarthy, Fred Allen and Fibber McGee.

There can be no doubt that, compared to what is offered free by independent broadcasters in the U.S. A. and Canada, CBC programs are simply not worth what they cost the listener. And unless the CBC starts worrying less about expanding its technical plant and increasing its administrative power, and more about improving its service, it will not be long before listeners across the country begin asking more and more frequently, "What are we paying for?"

Marg Or No Marg?

It is possible that the title of an old favorite, "Margie," may be one of the hottest topics of debate in this country for some months to come. The National Dairy Council has asked the Federal government to endeavor to have some substitute for butter available in this country this fall and winter, as a shortage of butter is predicted for the winter months.

Some weeks ago the government referred the question of the legality of the prohibition of the sale of manufacture of olcomargarine in Canada which is contained in the Dairy Products Act, to the Supreme Court of Canada for a decision, and this issue is received it is unlikely that any action will be taken. The matter has been brought into sharp focus by the decision of Newfoundland to join Canada. In Newfoundland the manufacture and sale of margarine has been legal for some years, and it is to be retained when that country becomes a part of Canada.

With the continued growth of the country and the greater concentration of industrial plants in the large cities, it is inevitable that the demand for margarine should increase, but it does not follow that the demand for butter will fall off far enough to endanger the present market. Countries like Great Britain and Holland have used margarine for many years, but Britain still uses all the butter that can be produced, and regularly imports more.

Hard Work

The other day we picked up an issue of The Toronto Saturday Night and read a piece by the financial editor. He said that the only way that Canada can continue to be reasonably prosperous was for everyone to work hard. Now we have seen the same advice in Canadian Business, in the reports of general managers of banks and from many other high-placed people. Frankly, we think the advice is all right, but we wonder if the people who hand it out do very much hard work themselves. This business of handing out advice is the easiest task of them all. To grab hold of the bus and end of a market and a good day's work is another matter. Maybe we are unfair but we think that only too many of the people who advise the rest of the people in the matter of working seem to have ample time to patronize golf links and summer resorts.

Public Apathy

(Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

The surprising thing about a recent beer and wine vote in Halifax was not the sale of the two beverages was approved but that only 16,000 of 50,000 qualified voters went to the polls. If the 34,000 who didn't vote should find conditions not to their liking, whatever their preference, they know where to put the responsibility.

Farmer's Column

R. J. Milligan, District Agriculturist

Last week we finished a discussion about the growing of baby chicks, and the feeding of laying poultry. In today's discussion, we hope to bring to your attention several points that will improve the quality of your eggs.

The rooster should be separated from the hens immediately after the hatching egg market has closed. They should be penned by themselves. There are several reasons for this. First, fertile eggs decompose rapidly. Blood spots and specks appear, thus causing your eggs to grade lower, and after a long period of production, the hens become broody. If they sit on these fertile eggs, chicks develop and grow rapidly. To illustrate, normal body temperature of a hen is 98 degrees, but the broody hen has a body temperature of 107 degrees. This should illustrate what I mean when I say that development starts very rapidly.

Frairie wool or shavings make better nesting material than straw. If straw is used, there may be an occasional kernel of grain in the nest, and the birds may scratch around in the nest causing eggs to break. They may start to eat the eggs broken in this manner. A poultry raiser should have one nest for every six birds, or have built in community nests.

There are other reasons why blood spots appear in eggs besides being fertile and slightly decomposed by broody hens. Avoid frightening the birds. Whistle, sing or talk when you are approaching the hen house to warn them that you are coming. The high producing birds are nervous birds, and if frightened, they jump around, often landing on some other hen's back, thus injuring the eggs in the sacks or oviducts.

Broods should not be too high from the floor. Heavy birds jump down from these high roosts, and may land on other birds or at times their body weight and the distance they jump may cause internal injuries, again causing blood spots in the eggs.

Why do we get bumpy eggs, or eggs with circles around the middle? The thin skin surrounding the white of the eggs are sometimes ruptured, before the shell formation has been completed. This rupture is often caused when the hen lumps around or gets excited. When this rupture is healed over, the bump on the egg shell is in the form of a healed scar or wound.

A farm flock should consist of one breed only. Different sized birds lay different sized eggs, and often eggs of different color. This makes grading more difficult, and when packing eggs, all the white eggs should be put in one carton, and brown eggs in another and so on. Avoid mixing them if possible.

Call your birds now. No poultry producer or farmer can afford to run an infirmary. It does not pay. Doubling statistics show that the average egg production per bird is 114. We are of the opinion that the production is higher. By keeping over your old birds, retain those that lay upwards of 150 eggs. Those that lay less should be fattened for market. It requires 50 pounds of feed per bird that lays 100 eggs in a season. Our present feed costs average approximately $3.50 per 100 pounds. If eggs of Grade A quality will net $3.25. Your 50 pounds of feed will cost approximately $3.00. Therefore you will make 25 cents for your labor and expenses. This is not enough. Therefore, cull your birds carefully and retain only those that produce 150 eggs or over to increase your profits.

I spoke of broody hens earlier in this article. If a hen has brooded three times, she should be marketed. Be sure to mark your broody hens. If you have a pair of scissors, cut the tail feathers on one side. If she broods the second time, cut the other side off. This will permit a quick glance to tell which are broody and which are not. I would suggest that the broody hens be cooped in an open coop to permit a thorough circulation of air. They should get her usual share of laying and maintenance ration together with an ample supply of water. If the broody coop has a wire floor, a free circulation of air will occur, and reduce the body temperature of the hen, and break up the brood in three days.

I have visited quite a number of farms this spring and summer and found dead birds lying around. I strongly recommend that these be buried or burned. These dead animals attract flies, and then the hens will peck the maggots that have developed on these dead birds, and may get the same disease the dead bird had.

Do not feed raw meat to your poultry, particularly from animals that died of a disease. Much better if you cook the meat. Cooked meat will supply a considerable amount of protein, help to provide a balanced ration and help to prevent cannibalism.

Insufficient Cod Liver Oil and oyster shells result in thin-shelled eggs. Be sure your hoppers are filled with oyster shells. A laying mash could have a 1 per cent calcium added. Cod Liver Oil can be added to your grain by warming the grain and the Cod Liver Oil and pouring the hot oil over the grain and stirring thoroughly.

The birds should be kept in units of 125 to 150. In this way we can avoid crowding and better development and more vigorous birds will result. The large vigorous birds are the ones that produce a large number of eggs.

UNDER THE STREETLAMP

As Bert and Mrs. Wyman left the movie, Bert was visibly more impressed with what they had just seen.

"It's really wonderful," he said, "what progress the films have made within a few short years, don't you think?"

"How so?" asked his wife. "Well," remarked Bert, "first they moved, then they talked, and now this one smells."

A pastor says it takes a woman to make a home. And according to Sid Coldwell, it takes a couple of them to break it.

Mrs. Woodliffe was proudly displaying a new hat to Mrs. Weyers. "It's lovely," said Mrs. Weyers. "But tell me, how do you manage to get so much money from your husband?"

"Oh, quite simple," was the triumphant reply. "I just tell him I'm going home to mother and he immediately hands me the fare."

Waitress: "Here's your shortcake, sir." Ted Farthing: "You call that a shortcake? Take it out and berry it."

Ogden MacLean: "What is it that has horns, a long pointed tail and carries a pitchfork?"

Red MacDougall: "I give up." Ogden: "I don't know either, but it's been following us ever since we left that last tavern."

Reporter: "Do your men get up bright and early?" Pessimistic Coach: "Only early."

"Now" began the architect, "if you'll give me a general idea of the kind of house you need—"

"I want something" replied Florence Slater, "to go with a door-knocker my husband sent home from Holland."

HELPFUL HINTS

Next time you serve baked ham slice, pour half a cup of maple syrup over the ham. Bake uncovered in a moderate oven from 50 to 60 minutes, baste frequently during the baking.

Grease stains on non-washable fabrics may be removed by placing clean blotters under and over the stained material. Then press with a warm iron. If you don't have clean blotters, use paper towels.

Sprinkle a pinch of dill in your chicken soup. Let the dill stand in cream or cottage cheese overnight for an extra touch. Don't overlook mashed potatoes, where a sprinkling of dill gives just the right touch.

To get your hands thoroughly clean and soft, add a teaspoonful of moistened sugar to your regular soapy lather.

A small drop of wax in the centre of each flower will keep tulips from opening wide.

RECIPES

Meat Pinwheels - To make a little meat go a long way, roll baking powder biscuit dough one-eighth of an inch thick, spread it with creamed meat (one cup ground meat combined with two-thirds cup white sauce made with one tablespoon each of flour and butter). Roll like a jelly roll, cut in three-quarter inch slices. Bake 15 minutes in hot oven. Serve with a white sauce or tomato sauce. You may heat tomato soup for a quick sauce. These are economical and appetizing with a salad for luncheon.

Jellied Chicken and Vegetable Salad

1/2 cup cold water
1 T. granulated gelatin
1/2 tsp. salt
1 1/2 c. boiling chicken broth
1 can pimiento
1 c. mixed cooked or canned vegetables
1 c. cooked or canned chicken.
Pour the cold water into a bowl and sprinkle the gelatin on top. Sliced lettuce, Mayonnaise.
Add the salt and boiling chicken broth and stir until the gelatin is dissolved. Pour a thin layer of this mixture into a loaf pan, chill slightly; then arrange on it the pimiento cut in strips and add a few of the cup of vegetables, which may be peas, string beans, carrots, celery, asparagus, etc. Chill until almost firm, then arrange on it the remaining vegetables, chicken, and gelatin mixture. Chill until firm then unmold on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise. Silver Cup —

Are you short of a grand prize, or a novelty award for your party games or club tournaments? You can make a miniature cup for a few cents.

Simply solder an old collar button to a large size thimble. The handles of the trophy are made from small size paper clips that have been fashioned artistically and then soldered to the top of the thimble. To make the prize still more effective you can have the thimble engraved either with the donor's name, the name of the event, or the date. The engraver will expect you to have the lettering done before you solder anything to the thimble, and he may undertake to set the whole thing up for you.

Add-a-Year Hem Is New Feature

Add-a-year hems, sleeves and leggings which keep little beanstalks from growing out of their coats should win palm-smacking applause from mothers.

All that Mom has to do to make this fall's coat a size larger next fall—the feature of one line's smartly styled coats for children—is to pull out threads. These release length tucked up in the hem, lining and sleeves of coats. The same trick works with accessorized leggings, which are used to turn coats into ensembles that wrap up the apple of Mom's eye from chin to toes.

CAPACITY OF THE FARM DUGOUT

How Much Water Do I Need?

The dugout must store a depth and volume of water equal to the water required for domestic, live stock, or irrigation use. Provision must be made for an average yearly loss of three to four feet by evaporation and seepage. A reserve depth of at least three to four feet should be maintained. To replace water by runoff, to insure continuing supply of fresh water. Where dugout water is to be used throughout the winter, a depth of five to six feet should remain prior to freeze-up to prevent freezing to the bottom. A minimum depth of eight feet in addition to actual use must therefore be provided when constructing a dugout.

Where water is to be used the year round for main live stock and domestic supply, a depth of 14 feet is required. Where a summer supply of water only is required, a depth of 12 feet is sufficient. Where the water is to be used solely for garden irrigation, a depth is not an important consideration. These recommended depths will provide a reasonably secure water supply, provided the subsoil is tight and seepage is not excessive.

WINTER WHEAT VARIETIES FOR WESTERN CANADA (Experimental Farm News)

The three varieties of winter wheat most commonly grown in Western Canada at present are Kharkov, Yogo, and Jones Pile. For many years these varieties have proved satisfactory in the south-western part of Alberta - the chief winter wheat growing area in the prairie provinces. Kharkov (preferably the M.C. 22 strain) and Yogo are probably the two most winter-hardy varieties under conditions that exist in the prairie provinces, and for that reason are the two most suitable for Western Canada. Yogo is a little superior to Kharkov M.C. 22 from the standpoint of non-shattering, but Kharkov M.C. 22 excels Yogo in strength of straw. They are both bearded varieties.

Jones Pile is a beardless variety and for that reason is preferred by a number of farmers.

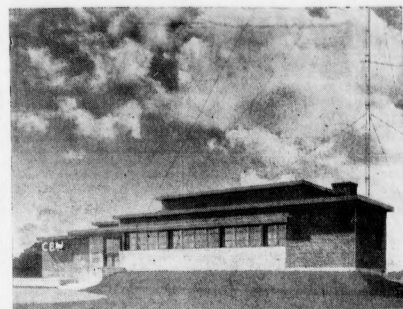

RAIN MAKING TESTS

In the Suffield district, about 40 miles west of Medicine Hat on the main line of the Canadian Pacific railway, scientists are experimenting with the dry ice process of making rain. Last week they did manage to generate a 20-minute light shower after two pounds of dry ice had been seeded into clouds at an 18,000 foot altitude.

The Defense Research Board is working with the National Research Council, the Dominion Meteorological Service and the Royal Canadian Air Force on this experiment. Suffield is in the heart of the southern Alberta drought area, and if rain making is a success there it should be possible to produce precipitation in any part of Western Canada.

Some success has been obtained in various parts of North America in making rain through the spreading of dry ice by airplanes. The Suffield experiment is calculated to reach a scientific conclusion as to the feasibility of the idea. A definite

OPEN NEW CBC STATION

Culminating some months of construction and testing the CBC's new 50,000 watt station, CBC, will open officially on September 8th. Located four miles from Lacombe, the new chain station makes the third transmitter on the prairies chain, following the original CBC at Watrous, and the new CBC located at Carman, Manitoba. Special broadcasts have been arranged for the opening of each of the new stations.

the area will be marked out and rain gauges placed on the ground. Airplanes will spread the dry ice over this area, and the results will be scientifically registered.

TILLAGE COMPETITIONS

Another step in the soil conservation education of the citizens of Alberta took the form of five one-way disk tillage competitions held recently at Viking, Cowley, Knechtlin, Morrin, and Lacombe.

Supervised by the Alberta Department of Agriculture's Extension Engineer, E. B. Martin, and B. T. Stephenson of the University of Alberta's Department of Agricultural Engineering, these competitions recalled something of the glory of the old plowing matches.

Not that they were quite the same. The old timers missed the thrill of the clean, straight furrow and the cries of the plowmen to their horses, but the skill and workmanship displayed by the one-way disk operators left little to be desired in an up-to-the-minute job of modern farm tillage.

"Competent handling of the one-way disk can do much to prevent erosion of our Western soils," says Mr. Martin, "and these contests are one way of bringing home to the farmers of this province that correct operation of this implement is an art worth cultivating."

the comparatively few home-made dugouts the farmers had built previous to 1935.

The big change came with the advent of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act, with administration headquarters at McCallum Hill building in Regina. The 36,000 watering places do not include the large irrigation projects, but do include a range of smaller works on the farm dugout to stock watering dams and smaller irrigation projects now operating at various points.

On these smaller water projects the Dominion Government under the authority of the PFRA had spent a grand total of $4,211,352 at the end of March of this year. On application, the farmer gets the benefit of free engineering advice as to location, construction and so forth, and equally as important, financial assistance that varies with the type of project desired. The financial assistance even applies to repairs (on application and recommendation) in cases where damage has been caused by floods or other natural causes within one year after the project has been completed.

But the extremely rapid year-by-year increase in the number of water projects in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta, if interesting from the bird's eye view, is vitally important to the farmer below because of the great change for the better it has made in his very day life. Some farmers even use the larger dugout for small, but important, individual irrigation tracts. All have the benefit of additional water for the home, for livestock, some even use the larger and modern dugouts for swimming pools.

The average life of a dugout has for some reason been set at ten years. That period was set before the Dominion Government stepped in with experts to supervise. It is now known that a properly constructed dugout should last far more than 20 years.
